Husqvarna Group again recognized as one of Europe's Best Employers

Husqvarna Group has once again been recognized as one of Europe's Best Employers, ranking 36th out of 1,000 companies in the Financial Times and Statista Europe's Best Employers 2026 ranking. The ranking is based on employee and peer recommendations across Europe. Husqvarna Group also ranks as the second-highest placed Swedish company in this year's list.

The annual ranking, published by the Financial Times in collaboration with leading data provider Statista, highlights organizations that are highly recommended by their own employees as well as by professionals working in the same industry. Husqvarna Group's inclusion reflects the company's continued focus on innovation, culture and long-term people development.

"Husqvarna Group is on a journey towards profitable growth, and this recognition highlights the importance of a strong culture and engaged employees to reach our goals. It is our people who will deliver on our ambitious strategy and shape the future of Husqvarna Group", says Maria Rönnberg, Executive Vice President People, Organization & Communication, Husqvarna Group.

The 2026 edition of Europe's Best Employers is based on an expanded and refined survey methodology. The ranking is derived from an independent, anonymous survey of a large sample of employees across Europe, evaluating both employees' willingness to recommend their own employer and their views of other employers in the same industry. Direct employee recommendations carry the greatest weight in the final score.

The company employs approximately 11,900 people globally and operates in more than 40 countries. The full ranking and methodology can be found here.
